

THE FOURTH OF MARCH.

With the midnight which divided yesterday from to-day was ended the existence of the XLVth Congress. To-day its successor comes into actual if not active life. Such active life, in the usual course of events, would begin in December next. It is probable, however, that certain emergencies of legislation will cause the calling of an extra session. At all events, whenever the XLVth Congress shall convene, the country will witness its reversion of the Senate of the United States into the hands of the Democracy, by that party to be controlled and organized. This places the entire Legislative department of the general government in the hands of that party. The revolution has been, all things considered, speedy and violent. Republican rule—more or less absolute—has continued for eighteen years. Reflecting upon the fact that within that time a great civil war has been fought, involving the very existence of the Nation itself, and that the Republican party represented and sustained the National idea and purpose, while the Democracy was inextricably identified with the opposite idea and purpose, the turn in affairs is to be regarded as one of the most notable and complete revolutions ever occurring in the history of any civilized people. It is not unlike in its nature and surroundings to that sharp and radical change in the political life of England which saw Charles II. placed upon the throne of his ill-fated father. The state of affairs in our country intensifies the importance of the next election of a President. It is to be deemed likely that if the Republicans elect one of their number to succeed Hayes, they may count with reason upon resuming control of the House of Representatives. On the contrary, the election of a Democratic President would be likely to perpetuate Democratic rule in the affairs of the Republic for an indefinite period of time.

THE STOREY COUNTY MECHANICS' UNION AND THEIR FAITHLESS LEGISLATORS.

Elsewhere we publish a series of resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the Mechanics' Union of Storey County with relation to the action of certain representatives of that county upon the Woodburn bill and like measures of relief from railroad extortions. These resolutions are very vehement and forcible. There is no effort to repress the honest indignation of the writer who penned them, no seeking for soft terms, nothing "mealy mouthed" in dealing with what these sturdy mechanics regard as a flagrant betrayal of their own and their neighbors. The resolutions convey their own lesson. That lesson is well worth taking to heart, roughly stated though it be by those blunt and outspoken workmen. Such reprehension as this is not to be lightly regarded. It strikes with a strong and ungloried hand and has its effect and is not at all to be dodged or despised.

THE RENO FIRE.

For the third time in its history the brave little city of Reno has suffered woeful injury by fire. The greater part of the business portion of the place and many dwellings are reduced to blackened embers and ashes. The shock is a most terrible one. The distress and misery thus entailed are beyond expression in words. The sympathy of our citizens is hearty and genuine. The quick relief offered by the Legislature is a substantial expression of solicitude, admirably well-timed. We trust that Carson, so open-handed in relieving the distressed of Virginia City, will be quick to offer to do its share in helping the homeless and homeless hungry to an alleviation of their sudden-coming troubles. In the meantime, if it be within the limits of good taste to offer congratulations in the midst of such a scene of desolation and misery, we will offer our own to the proprietors of the Journal and Gazette upon their fortunate escape from the general ruin.

"LOCAL" RAILROAD LEGISLATION STILL POSSIBLE.

Senator Boardman made a gallant struggle yesterday to bring before the Senate his modified form of the Woodburn Bill. This bill omits the 6th (or bullion exemption) Section, and fixes the maximum of freight charges at 10 cents. The vote on engrossment was a tie. The Lieutenant Governor cast his vote in the affirmative. The bill ought to pass to-day. This, if done, gives it three days in the Assembly, and makes three readings possible without a suspension of the rules, provided it be transmitted to the Assembly to-day.

WHAT KEARNEY SAYS.

Yesterday a somewhat anxious gentleman of a conservative turn of mind asked with a tone of solicitude if any startling news had come from Denis Kearney and the Sand Lots concerning the President's veto of the Chinese bill. His question is fully and curiously answered by the following:

San Francisco, March 3.—At the sand lots yesterday Kearney announced his intention of supporting the new Constitution and of advocating it throughout the State. A resolution was passed to the effect that the anti-Chinese bill was not what the workmen wanted, and that the veto was none of their funeral.

RAIDS UPON THE STATE TREASURY.

When many men are of the same mind, and the subject of agreement is the proposition or assumption or postulate that the State Treasury is a goose, and that the plucking of the same is a legitimate business, or a license justified by immemorial custom, then is the way toward small peculations not greatly trammeled by any misgivings or qualms of conscience. The Treasury is endangered by the very terms of such a false estimate; for what is called public opinion is all too potent, even when itself is either opposed to any actual statute or dormant and inactive, in the presence of that which is reprehensible and injurious.

The methods of self-persuasion toward availing one's self of so convenient a means of imbursement as is offered by a plausible relief bill (even when the pretext for relief is an afterthought, if not amenable to the law of limitations), is not difficult of attainment nor yet unusual in practice. The sort of avarice which is fed by comfortable salaries finds food for its own stimulation in the ingenious inventions of the lobbyist and the cunning devices of the perquisite-seeker.

Keep open a keen and vigilant eye, oh sons of Lyncurus, lest the small deer which feed upon the odds and ends that find expression in "relief bills" come to eat up the substance of your State's economies, and fleth from your strong box such sums as, aggregated, will despoil the Commonwealth of a sum which had better be kept on hand for larger and more legitimate emergencies than those which are trumped up by hungry men whose appetites are sharpened by a shameless greed of that which finds lodgment within the public crib.

WHAT SENATOR SARGENT SAYS.

The MORNING APPEAL has been censured in some quarters for its outspoken denunciations of the policy and personal performances of the present incumbent of the White House. We pronounced our unqualified disbelief in Hayes's honesty of purpose and loyalty to party well-nigh two years ago. When he had announced his Cabinet, then we spoke without hesitation or reserve. From that time to the present the President has steadily lost his friends. One must be loyal to somebody or something to have and to hold friendship. Hayes is loyal in no one respect or direction.

Senator Sargent's opinions of the Chinese Bill veto message and its authority are reported as follows: The message is weak and inconsistent. The Administration crouches at the demand of the Eastern press and money bags, and but feebly deprecates the indignation of the Pacific. I am not surprised at the course of the Administration. I supposed I had its adhesion to the principles of the bill, but at was all hypocrisy, which I should have expected. It abandoned the blacks in the South to their fate, and selfishly threw away the Republican party there. It is naturally reckless when the interests of free labor on the Pacific Coast are at stake, and sacrifices without remorse the Republican party there. I would rather have twenty years of Democratic rule and be rid of the Chinese curse than a century of such Republicanism as that of this Administration with unrestricted Chinese immigration.

Hayes was determined from the first to veto this bill and was bound to find some pretense on which it could be done. All his pretended opposition to the Chinese was designed to capture the Pacific Coast Senators on such matters as the New York nominations. It was never founded on conviction and vanished the moment any clamor was raised. A great work has been done by Congress and destroyed by Hayes. The only advantage left is the instruction of the country, making the work easier in the future. I hope the California Senators and members will keep up the fight, for in time they will succeed. The non-capitalist class in the East are interested, if I may judge from the volume of letters I get asking for information, and they will soon make themselves felt by the doctrinaires. I hope the people of California will calmly bide their time, which must come. The great obstacle in this fight has been the prejudices exerted by the intemperate utterances of some of the anti-Chinese partisans. That has been a powerful lever for workers against the bill in and out of Congress.

THE LATE SHOOTING AFFRAY IN BODIE.

The Bodie Standard of Friday recites the incidents of the late fatal affray in that place. It gives the name of the surviving principal as Henry Heiff instead of Heath, as it was first reported. Con Sullivan, the man who was accidentally shot through the body is said to be a brother of that Sullivan who was killed in Virginia City by Harrington. Of some of the incidents of this bloody affray the Standard says.

When the firing commenced, a lady, the wife of one of our leading merchants, had just stepped out of the Bodie Pharmacy, and was by the side of Taft when he received the first shot. Later Sullivan fell down directly at her feet. It is needless to say that she was greatly alarmed. Fred Page was also standing outside the drug store at the time. Frank McAvoy, one of the clerks in Gillson & Barber's, was standing behind the counter at the north side of the store when the firing commenced. He ran to the front to see what was the matter, and as he reached the end of the counter a bullet came crashing through the window and passed through two cans of lobsters on the lower shelf and lodged in a third. The liquor in the cans was splashed over McAvoy's face, and he beat a hasty retreat toward the office in the rear of the store. The sidewalk in front of the store has several bullets in it, and marks where others glanced off. In front of the drug store is a big splash of blood where Taft was laid. Henry Heiff is a thick-set German, a miner, recently employed at the Red Cloud.

Neither he nor Taft have heretofore been regarded as dangerous, or even quarrelsome men. The difference occasioning the bloody duel is said to have been caused by that fruitful source of trouble in this world—a woman. It is not known positively who fired the shot which wounded Sullivan.

ROMANCE OF A EUREKA COUPLE.

Several months ago there came to town from the East a young widow, who at once became a favorite in society, her sprightly ways and pretty looks making her company much sought after. The favored man, the one on whom she bestowed her most languishing smiles, happened to be a well-to-do and good looking widower, and it was soon whispered that they were engaged. The widower, however, was one of those cold blooded men, and his affection was so languid that he was in no haste to marry her. In the meantime a friend from Sacramento came to Eureka, paid him a visit, met the charming widow and fell head over heels in love with her, and vowed his willingness to marry her on the spot. The widower finally offered to relinquish his rights, privileges, etc., for $300 in hand paid. The bargain was consummated, the coin paid over and formal notice of the change of title was given to the lady. She assented to the exchange, was married, and went to the house of the Sacramento man to live, and was apparently happy. The widower did very well so long as the money lasted, but soon he commenced to mope and sigh. So long as the widow was close at hand, the development of his affection had been slow enough, but when she had left town and he could see her no more, his love for her grew, and swelled and bulged out like a Eureka girl with her first long dress. His heart beat like a twenty stamp quartz mill, and his blood first became tepid, then steaming and finally it boiled. He took the first train, bent on seeking consolation in the bustle and life of San Francisco, but as luck would have it, on the boat on which he took passage from Sacramento was the identical widow. They met; he hung about her, he made love to her, and he eloped with her—taking the first train from San Francisco for the east, and now in Chicago they are enjoying the felicity of the conjugal state. The injured Sacramento husband has lost his purchase money and wife, but takes it philosophically and is willing to call the account square.—Eureka Leader.
